Training Content Development Services

CornerStone Leadership Online has the technology, designers and application specialists to convert your traditional classroom training content into self-paced training modules that can reside on the Internet or your organization's Intranet, making the training available 24/7. There will be less need to reserve conference rooms, coordinate schedules, or travel off site to take and/or deliver your organization's training.

Whether it is your new employee orientation, departmental specific procedure, company policies, or your sales team's new service and product updates, there are solutions available at CornerStone Leadership Online that will help make your materials easier to deliver, easier and more effective to absorb for the learner, and more cost effective than you might imagine.

Training development is separated into five stages: Definition, Design, Production, Testing, and Delivery. Progressing through each stage during a project ensures quality, completeness, customer satisfaction, and end results that demonstrate training ROI.
